LOCAL HOME DEMONSTRATION WOMEN PLAN TO ATTEND STATE MEET

Next Saturday, August 30, in the office of the home demonstration agent, Miss Velma Hambleton, final plans will be made for three Medina County Home Demonstration Club ladies to attend the State Home Demonstration meet which will be held in Beaumont, September 3-5. The ladies representing the county at this affair will be Mrs. Felix Stinson of Rio Medina club, Mrs. L. A. Wiemers of the Murphy club, and Mrs. Harrison Wilson of the Yancey club. Mrs. Louis Oefinger of the Quilhi-New Fountain Home Demonstration Club is the alternate.

"Nutrition in Defense" has been chosen as the theme for the annual meeting this year, the president, Mrs. A. J. Brown of Nederland, said in her report to Miss Helen Swift, Extension Service sociologist who works with rural women's organizations. Members of the association will discuss plans for making their Good Neighbor program reach the largest number of people "so that they will be eager to produce and eat food that will 'make Americans for a strong America'". Mrs. Brown and others who conferred this spring with Secretary of Agriculture, Claude R. Wickard, will report to the Association on their talk with the secretary regarding the place of the home demonstration club women in the national nutrition program.

In addition to the business sessions, the convention program will include a get-acquainted reception, a banquet, and trips to points of interest in and around Beaumont. One special feature planned by the Jefferson County hostess is a fish fry on the Gulf.

P. T. A. TO SPONSOR ASSEMBLY PROGRAMS

The Hondo P. T. A. is sponsoring six assembly programs this year, and season tickets to adults will be sold in a campaign to be conducted within the next few days. School children will be admitted free to all except one of these lyceum numbers, but adults will be required to pay. Season tickets for the six numbers will cost one dollar.

These programs are furnished the school by the Southern Assembly Programs, Inc., headed by Mr. Harry Byrd Kline. Mr. Kline has been in this business for years, and has sent very attractive programs to Hondo in the past. Heretofore, school authorities have sponsored these programs, but this year the P. T. A. was asked to help. The first number of the current season will be presented at 8:45 A. M. Monday, September 15th. The entertainers will be the James Scott Company, headed by James Scott, tenor, who sang with the Chicago Civic Light Opera Company, and Harriet Hahn, soprano, who has had extensive radio and concert engagements in Chicago. Edna Lundberg Scott, who will be the accompanist, has been on the concert stage ten years.

HIGH SCHOOL REGISTRATION

Students who intend to attend Hondo High School are asked to register on the following dates:

Seniors: Friday morning, September 5th.

SKIRT HANDICAP DOESN'T STOP HONDO LIONS

Clad in women's attire, the Hondo club members were "Lions in sheep's clothing" as far as the Sabinal Lions were concerned last Friday night when the latter suffered a 10 to 2 defeat in a soft ball game under the floodlights in that city. A large crowd of fans turned out to watch the Hondo Lions do some "tail-twisting". Although the Sabinal boys hollered "ouch", they are coming back for more. The return game will be played on Barry Field in Hondo, beginning at 8 P. M., Friday, September 5th. The players will again be dressed in women's togs and if you want to have fun come see the Lions act like "what they ain't".

COMING TO FIREMEN'S DANCE

The happy looking "wranglers" in the picture above are the American Maid Blue Ridge Playboys, featured part of the Texas Quality Network show, "Come and Get It", heard each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 11:45 a. m.

The boys are Hondo-bound aboard their "American Maid Band Wagon", and are appearing here during the day, Saturday, August 30th, through the courtesy of the Houston Milling Company, Inc., makers of American Maid Flour and Arrow Feeds. They will appear at the Grell & Moehring

Food Store from 3 o'clock p. m. on. Arrangements have also been completed for the boys to lend their famous "Music in the Texas Style" for the Big Fireman's Street Dance that night. Leon Selph, fore-man of this musical aggregation, promises the boys will be in tip-top form for both appearances. Herman "problem child" Standlee will be there with his sensational electric guitar playing. Sir Richard and his big Bull Fiddle will be "wrestling" it out, "Cheech" Davenport will be swinging his squeeze-box, and last, but not least, there's "Gussy-Wussy" Plant, the Ladies' man, strumming along rhythm on his guitar.

In addition to the street dance, a Carnival will be a part of the featured entertainment at the Hondo Fire Department's eighth semi-annual affair. An evening of fun and frolic—conducted in the usual orderly manner—is assured every member of the family, young and old. It's tomorrow night, Saturday, August 30, in Hondo. Dancing to the tunes of the Blue Ridge Playboys will begin at 8 p. m.

Pay your taxes and save money.

Respectfully,

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

If a person is lame, halt and blind, I guess he maybe would be excused for not seeing what they are cooking up down on the Mighty Potomac. But if you are only near-sighted and need one crutch and not 2, you have no alibi. But, in Germany they didn't see it quick enough and she looks like we will turn out to be just as simple.

We figure it is a hot joke when Mr. Hitler has an election and tells everybody how to vote. If they heed Mr. Hitler they stay out of jail. But out yonder in our own San Francisco, the home of the Native Sons and the hard-shootin' pioneers, they got their orders on voting, just like in Berlin or Hamburg. Herr Ickes has told them. He says, "here you rootin'-tootin' outfit, you are gonna get into the electric business. You will vote for municipal ownership—and not maybe. So, do so."

Out there they have already voted the thing down 7 times in a row, but this time the orders are coming from the Royal Rostum.

And we snicker at Hans and Fritz, and at socialism, and at dictators, elsewhere.

Yours with the low down,
JOE SERRA

NEW MANAGEMENT FOR ARMSTRONG CAFE

The Armstrong Cafe, closed for the past several months, is being re-modeled and will be re-opened this Saturday, August 30, under new management. Mrs. Alvin Britsch will be in charge of the Armstrong Cafe.

Work on the interior of the cafe is being rushed, awnings have been put up in front of the building, and other preparations are being made for the opening. Mr. Britsch informed us that from 2 until six o'clock P. M. Saturday, Aug. 30, the management will serve free sandwiches and coffee. Saturday and every day thereafter, the Armstrong Cafe will feature the same good meals and courteous and prompt service that characterize the Bob Cat Grill.

REDBIRDS DEFEAT LA COSTE AT CASTROVILLE SUNDAY

The Hondo Redbirds handed the LaCoste Leopards an eight to five licking at Castroville last Sunday as a part of the big celebration which was held there. This made the fourth time this season that the Redbirds have beaten LaCoste. The highlight of the game was Parsons' home run in the eighth inning with two runners on the sacks, the score tied, and two out. Ep. Finger pitched a fine game, as did Geiger, but two walks and Parsons' home run fixed Geiger's clock in the eighth.

The Redbirds play a red hot out-fit Sunday when they go to Santone to meet the Camp Normoyle Post Team. The game will be played on the San Antonio Air Depot diamond at two o'clock.

SOLDIERING NO ICE-CREAM PARTY

Eddie Leinweber, HQ, 12th Cavalry, APO 201, Ragley, Louisiana.

Mr. Fletcher Davis, The Anvil Herald Print Shop, Hondo, Texas.

Dear Mr. Davis:
 My address has been changed for an indefinite length of time from headquarters, 12th Cavalry, Fort Bliss, Texas to address as given above. I trust that you will note the change in address in order that I may again so welcome receive that "good old home town paper."

I assume that you will welcome a few comments on my army life and the conditions out here in the lowlands and tall pines of Louisiana. The rain beats down quite often—we don't run for shelter; we sleep on a paper-thin pallet on the hard, irregular ground—certainly we don't ask for an "inner-spring" mattress; our food may contain sand, dust, or vegetation, or we have to sit out on the open ground in the midst of a downpour of rain—and we don't throw a knife at the mess sergeant; we wash our own sweat-drenched clothes under cold showers with facial soap—what a job! the ticks, the buggers (better known to me as red bugs), the long hours and little sleep—I assume you know the results of them all. It is called a he-man's job, not an ice-cream party or what have you. Yet, it is an interesting and wonderful life.

My position is quite interesting as I am stenographer for the Regimental Commander and the Plans and Training Officer, which puts me in the "nerve center" of it all and aware of the situation most of the time. Instead of riding a horse, I ride a command scout car.

I can plainly see in this branch of the service that whatever the final status of the Draft Extension Bill may be, the list of deserters will remain mighty thin.

Most sincerely,
 Eddie A. Leinweber.

Utopia Chapter was down from Utopia Wednesday on business. Mrs. Stewart informs us that Utopia is soon to organize an active Chamber of Commerce. It is remembered that Utopia citizens once sought Hondo's co-operation in securing a straight road between the two places, but received little encouragement here and allowed the matter to drop. It is to be hoped that both places will see the importance of such a road and unite in the effort to secure it as a link in No. 173 to connect No. 83 and the northwestern plains country with No. 9 and deep water at Corpus Christi.

Misses Lucy and Anne Davis and Hettie Nester of Hondo and Miss Dorothy Power of San Antonio returned home Monday evening from a four days motor trip through West Texas and part of New Mexico. They left Thursday afternoon, going as far as Del Rio for the night, and the following day drove through Alpine, the Davis Mountains and Pecos to Carlsbad, New Mexico. Saturday morning, with a party of over 750 people, they visited the beautiful and mammoth Carlsbad Caverns. Later in the day they drove through Guadalupe Mountain Pass to El Paso, Texas, where they spent Saturday night and part of Sunday. The return home was made a different route, by way of Van Horn, Fort Stockton, where they spent Sunday night, Ozona and Rocksprings. They visited briefly with friends in Del Rio, Sanderson and El Paso.

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

Inflation is the "little man upon the stairs" in Washington these days. Some observers say that he is already clearly visible; others argue that he isn't there right now, but that he soon will be. But whatever they may think about the immediate future, most Washingtonians agree that the subject of inflation is probably the biggest one at the capital at the present time.

Demonstration of this belief is the fact that hearings on the Henderson price control bill have been the best summer box office attraction in Washington. It is unusual for members of Congress to attend any hearings but those of committees upon which they serve, but in this instance rows of seats were reserved up front in the hearings room for the persons who desired to attend—and these chairs were filled regularly.

In addition to Congressmen, virtually every department or agency of the government had its own official observer. The implications of inflation, or of price control efforts aimed at halting it, are so broad that they are likely to affect nearly every branch of government activity.

WSS—

Leon Henderson, sponsor of the national measure on which hearings were opened, made it clear in his testimony that he thought Congress would enact wage control (or wage ceiling) legislation within the year. He did not advocate this as part of his own price control bill, apparently feeling that wages should be regulated by some other government agency than the one which he himself heads. In other words, he contends that wage control and price control are two different problems.

This approach is reminiscent of the old story about the man who asked his companion in the leg and arm, "Why does your mouth hurt?" "When it's your shin that's hurt!" Economists are pointing out in connection with the price hearings a fact that ought to be clear to a layman: that wages are a factor in determining prices—and if wages rise considerably, prices will rise also.

WSS—

From this point of view, facts on wages are being studied here with some care. Thus, for example, the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported that average increases for the first six months of 1941 ranged from 4.9 percent to 9.6 percent, affecting more than 24 million workers in more than five thousand manufacturing establishments. About one out of three can be little disagreed that these rises will inevitably have a very direct effect upon prices in industries concerned. You can't get a jack under an automobile, and raising the jack, and expect the car to stay at exactly the same height.

One really concerned with the inflation danger wants to see these facts passed over lightly in the testimony. There is a feeling that it would be easier politically to put a tag on prices than to put one on factors that go into making up prices. The only trouble is that in doing so, an economic law would be so violated that no workable remedy would have been achieved.

WSS—

The President himself has said virtually the last word on this difficult subject of prices. Here's Mr. Roosevelt's analysis:

"There cannot be price stability if labor costs rise abnormally—Labor has more to gain from price stability than from abnormal wage increases, for these are likely to be inflationary and quickly overtaken by rises in living cost. . . . Labor as a whole, fares best under a labor policy which recognizes wages in the defense industries will not substantially exceed the prevailing wage rates in comparable defense industries where fair practices have been maintained."

Being facts like these would be a start towards handling the "little man upon the stairs"—the inflation.

"What is ignorance?" asked John-teacher.

"It's when you don't know something and have to ask somebody."

WSS—

COTTON STAMPS AVAILABLE

If the 63 cotton growers of Medina County use all the cotton stamps they have qualified for this year, they will exchange about $1500 for cotton goods, according to V. P. King, chairman of the AAA committee.

Records in the local AAA office indicate that approximately 750 acres have been voluntarily taken out of cotton under the supplementary cotton program, and cotton stamps are being issued on this basis, he said.

The purpose of the supplementary cotton program, for which an additional $25,000,000 was allotted this year, is designed to reduce still further the cotton acreage allotment under the 1941 agricultural conservation program. The cotton stamp program is operated on an entirely voluntary basis and does not affect any other payments earned under the farm program, the chairman continued.

Cotton growers, who reduce below the smaller of their 1941 cotton allotment or 1940 planted acres, are eligible to receive stamps at 10 cents per pound times the normal yield on the acres voluntarily reduced. Farmers who are interested in one cotton crop may earn a maximum of $25 in stamps and those having an interest in more than one cotton crop are eligible for a maximum of $50.

CHAPTER X

The New Year's festivities and the trade were over at Elkwan. The dance in the sleephouse, for which Etienne, seated high on a sugar barrel, provided the music from an ancient and scarred violin, had passed off without compelling the interference of the factor as peacemaker. The customary present of sugar and flour, tea and pork, had been given to each family of hunters and the Crees had feasted and gossiped to their hearts' content, oblivious of bitter moans to come on far trap-lines when, if game were hard to find, their children would whimper with hunger. The last of the dog-teams had jingled up the river trail or down the delta bound for Akimiski. Thanks to Souci, it had been an unheard-of trade which had come to the little post. Not only had he brought across the ice the Elkwan Crees but some from Kapiskau and Attawapiskat, as well. A good joke on Graham and Boucher.

For a week Garth and Etienne were busy sorting and pressing the fur, which was to go by sled immediately to Albany.

"Twenty-eight thousand dollars," said the factor as he finished checking his list. "Our little trips inland after Souci and over to the island were rather worth while, my friend."

Etienne grinned. "No little post lak' dis evair mak' dat trade on dis bay. Dey geeve you bigger place soon. You tak' Etienne Savanne wid you?"

"Take you with me, you old villain? How could I get along without you?"

"It Sure Grinds Me to Think of That McDonald Coming in Here."

You're responsible for this catch of fur, and you know it."

Savanne gravely shook his head. "Eet was you who tak' de chance on de riviere to tin' Souci. Wen we go to Albany I tell dem peopl' dat de new man at Elkwan ees hell on catch de fur."

Guthrie stopped to laugh at the serious half-breed. Of the loyalty of his head man, who had taught him practically all he knew about pelts, he had had ample proof.

Down the coast over the sea-ice traveled the sled loaded with the Christmas trade. At Kapiskau, where the early January dusk overtook them, they turned up the delta to the post to pass the night with the surprised Boucher, whose Indians at Akimiski had left him to trade with McDonald. Starting the following morning under the stars, before the light died, the sled from Elkwan sighted the buildings of Fort Albany.

As Garth and Etienne entered the trade room, Cameron, curious of the result of their mission, called: "Well, well, what's the news from the island? Did you get across the ice?"

"Yes, we got across a week before Christmas, but had a tough time," Guthrie dissembled gravely, nudging Etienne.

"Didn't see how you could do any good going over there. Your man failed to hold any of the Elkwan people, then?" surmised the disappointed Cameron. "Same way with Attawapiskat and Kapiskau—they lost most of their people—went to the schooner. It sure grinds me to think of that McDonald coming in here and taking all that fur."

"Well, he outbids us for it, and it's only human in the Indians to let him have it. How much is the whole island trade worth in an average year, anyway?" suddenly asked Garth.

"Let's see," said Cameron, scratching his grizzled head. "Um, I should say that it runs about two hundred fox skins, all kinds."

"Well, Mr. Cameron," drawled the factor of Elkwan. "I've got half of it out on the sled, then."

"What?" Cameron stared stupidly into the twinkling eyes of the man before him. "Thought you said you didn't—half of it? What'd'you mean, half of it? Half of what?" sputtered the puzzled trader.

"Why, half of the Akimiski trade. We got a hundred skins."

"You got a hundred—? Why, man, you said you didn't hold 'em—your people. Are you crazy, Guthrie?" cried the excited Cameron.

Unable to contain his mirth, Etienne exploded at the far end of the trade counter, as Garth replied: "You took it for granted that we failed. I didn't say we fell down," chafed Guthrie.

"For heaven's sake, man, stop your fooling and tell me the truth. Do you mean to say that you've got a hundred fox from Akimiski on that sled out there?" demanded Cameron.

"I do."

"Well—I'll be—skinned alive!" And the dazed trader stood, fists on hips gazing at the grinning Garth and Etienne.

"How in Jehoshaphat did you do it? You got 'em, after all, with Souci?" "Souci and Etienne, here, scared them to death."

Then, when the fur packs had been brought in and the dogs fed, Guthrie told the story.

"Do you realize, major, that this is the largest Christmas trade ever made by a subsidiary post of Albany? Your scheme and your nerve in seeing it through make the rest up the coast look like pretty dead people. My heartiest congratulations!" The factor of Albany grasped Guthrie's hand.

"The men who turned this trick are Etienne and old Souci," protested Garth. "I don't want you to forget them. I did little."

Cameron slapped the proud half-breed on the back. "No fear of my forgetting Etienne Savanne. He's worked with me too many years. Now I wish you'd listen to what they write from Moose."

The Albany factor went to his desk and, returning with a letter, read to Guthrie:

"The Montreal office has got the idea that this freetrader, McDonald, may be the man wanted in Nova Scotia for a murder committed about three years ago. A returned soldier struck and killed a man supposed to be his wife's lover. He was traced to Newfoundland. According to McMann at Charlton Island, the description of the soldier tallies with the appearance of this Laughing McDonald. I have written Montreal that the schooner is wintering on this coast. I expect the provincial police will show up here soon to investigate."

"Now, what'd'you think of that?" demanded Cameron of the man whose thoughts were centered on the homecoming of a soldier with disfigured face—a face repulsive, unbearable to the woman whose weakness had caused the murder.

"There must be ten thousand men in Canada with scarred faces, Cameron. Because Laughing McDonald happens to have one doesn't make him the murderer."

Cameron sensed that the reply had a personal tinge—was in the nature of a defense of the maimed legions, and said quietly: "No, of course not, but this McDonald sailed out of St. Johns. Queer if he should be the bird they're after."

"How many police will they send on this case?"

"Oh, not more than two."

"I'm sorry for them, then. They'd never come back. Do you think that two men can go to that schooner in Seal cove and get McDonald, if he's the guilty man? He wouldn't be taken alive—and I've a notion that life isn't worth much to McDonald Ha! Ha!"

"Why, you seem to sort of sympathize with this pirate who's stealing our trade," objected the other.

The gray eyes of the factor of Elkwan held those of Cameron in a penetrating look, as he said—"I do."

The brooding face of the man with the scarred cheek sought the window. The tragedy of the man at Seal cove, if he proved to be the Nova Scotian soldier wanted by the police, was, he realized, simply the story of Garth Guthrie in an exaggerated form. The wife he had come home to, like Ethel, had turned from the mutilated face—lacked the womanhood to shield him with her heart from the mockery of an unfeeling world. How many of the Canadian maimed, he wondered, the broken, the crippled, had walked in Gethsemane with Garth Guthrie and Laughing McDonald? How many had seen veiled horror in the eyes of those they loved?

"Well, I sympathize with any man whose wife goes wrong," the voice of Cameron went on, after a pause, "but that don't justify murder, Guthrie."

"I'm not so sure," was the quiet response, "when a man comes home with a comic mask for a face, that he isn't justified in killing both his wife and the man she turns to. Put yourself in his place, Cameron. Even the children on the streets must have mocked him as he passed. Think of the hell he lived through—then she, his refuge and his anchor—falls him."

Again Cameron felt that the man championing the unknown McDonald was making the case his own. That Guthrie was sensitive of his scarred cheek he already was aware and it irritated the older man into blurring outright: "Guthrie, don't take offense at what I'm going to say, but it seems to me that you must be vain as a girl to have that scar always on your mind. Why, man, you're handsome enough to carry a dozen scars. Nobody ever thinks of it, except to envy your war record."

Guthrie's mouth curled slightly in answer: "Man, I've forgotten all about that scar, but I can't forget the men who were not so lucky."

But as Cameron's hand left the shoulder of the factor of Elkwan, he was sure that the furrow across the cheek of the younger man had played its part in a personal tragedy.

As Guthrie left the trade house to seek his room at Cameron's hospitable quarters and make himself presentable for the supper on which Mrs. Cameron would spare no effort, he turned for a short stroll across the clearing. He was approaching the mission when the fur-hooded figure of a woman passed him at a short distance on a parallel path. The face in the hood was turned from him but the swinging stride of the moccasined feet aroused his curiosity. The white women residents of the post could be counted on the fingers of a hand. It was a stranger—a new missionary teacher at the orphan Indian school, doubtless. At the mission the paths met, and Guthrie turned with a "good evening," as the woman in the fur capote came abreast, to gasp, with a furiously pounding heart, as he looked into the laughing eyes of Joan Quarrier.

"You! Here?" he exclaimed, gazing at the uptilted hood as if at a ghost. "Welcome to Albany, Mr. Exile," she cried, extending a mitted hand. "I've just left Mrs. Cameron, and knew of your arrival with that fabulous amount of fur. Congratulations on your defeat of Laughing McDonald."

"You—wintering at Albany," he continued, "and you never told me!" The color rose to the dark hair on her forehead. "I found a job. You see they needed a nurse terribly, at the school." Her eyes avoided his searching look now. "My brother returns in the spring, so I decided to wait for him here."

"But when I left, you were leaving in a day or two for Moose," he relentlessly persisted. "And you wrote my Christmas letter and never told me you were only ninety miles away," he added reproachfully.

"I—I couldn't interfere with the—your fight for the fox trade," she replied weakly.

"Well, the fact is, Miss Joan Quarrier," he said with a laugh, "that you're here at Albany, and I'm at Albany, and I hereby announce that I'm going to stay a day, or two, or three, and talk to you."

"I'm sure," she said with a low bow, "that you are most flattering. But you forget that my employer, Mr. Swan, does not approve of you, sir."

"All the worse for Swan, then, for I'm going to see you tomorrow morning, afternoon, and evening. Swan or no Swan. I am a masterful man and will have my way. What time tonight do I knock on the door of the Reverend Swan?" With all his eyes Garth was caressing the face which had come to him by the fire in the snow, followed him over the tundra of Akimiski, companioned his dreams. The miracle of her being here—to talk to—look at, when he had thought her south across the forests! And why had she stayed on in the dreary north?

"I think you could come up tonight," Joan's teeth flashed in an alluring smile. "I'll try to reconcile Mr. Swan to the bitter dose of your presence. He needs me here, you know—finds my experience valuable."

Removing his mitten, with a quick movement Garth slipped off the mitten of the surprised girl and took her hand. "I need you here," he said, "as well as Swan. Eight o'clock tonight!" And walked swiftly away, mad hope in his brain, his emotions out of hand.

Why had she stayed? Why had she stayed? he kept asking himself as he hurried to Cameron's house.

At supper at the Camerons' Guthrie said: "I met an old friend on the clearing tonight."

The kindly eyes of the factor's wife grew quizzical as they met the glance of her guest. "She was here when Etienne came to the kitchen and told us of your success. What did you do to that girl last September? She and I have talked a lot about you this winter."

Guthrie's heart warmed to the inference. He felt the blood in his face, and strove to cover his embarrassment with the question: "How did she come to stay and help that effigy of a man, Swan?"

Mrs. Cameron smiled. "They were dreadfully in need of some one who had training. Half the children had some ailment and Swan and his wife were at their wits' end. I suppose Joan couldn't resist the call, as her brother was to return to the bay in the spring."

"Did you meet him?" asked Garth. "Oh, yes, they ate here several times. Very important person—the doctor!"

"Ah-h!" This from Cameron. "What's the matter," laughed Garth. "Didn't you like him?"

"Like him? It was all I could do to keep my hands off that rooster," growled the lord of Albany. "He made a formal protest in writing to the company to the effect that he had been insulted by you and that you refused to get his stuff on Akimiski, but I told them at Moose what I thought of him."

Garth was grateful to Cameron for his omission of other details of Quarrier's charges, which he knew Joan had scornfully demolished.

"Well, Miss Quarrier is not responsible for her brother. Could I bring her over from the Mission tonight? Swan almost kicked me out in September."

"Why, of course, Major Guthrie. I was going to ask you to," said Mrs. Cameron. "The poor child has a dreary enough time with the Swans. They've been worrying about her soul, you know, because of her liberal views on religion."

After supper Garth hurried over the trail to the mission. At his knock the door was opened by the missionary.

If Garth Guthrie had been susceptible to withering looks from a reverend gentleman whose meager frame stiffened uneasily in the black cloth and clerical collar affected by Mr. Swan, he would have been embarrassed at the chilly reception extended to him when he said:

"Good evening, Mr. Swan! I have come to take Miss Quarrier over to the Camerons' for the evening."

"You, sir," indignantly replied the missionary, "have put yourself beyond the pale—have no right to the society of pure women."

Hands on hips, for a space Garth smiled good-naturedly down on the greatly excited Swan, struggling heroically with the part his conscience bade him play. Then he said quietly: "Swan, if you choose to believe the nonsense with which Quarrier has filled your peanut brain, there is no law to prevent it. But Miss Quarrier has had opportunity to judge and she doesn't believe it. She is also her own mistress and capable of determining her own actions. She is going to the Camerons' with me now. Tell her I'm here!"

The last was spoken with such cold vehemence that Reverend Swan instinctively drew back, fearing bodily harm. But the little man was stubborn. "Miss Quarrier was placed under my protection by her brother. I have a duty—"

"Oh, is that you, Mr. Guthrie?" called a feminine voice from somewhere in the building. "Just a minute! I'm putting on my coat."

"Miss Quarrier," announced the red-tinted missionary, aware that the situation was swiftly slipping from his control, "I forbid you walking to the Camerons' with this man."

TO CURE UNEMPLOYMENT

George Robinson In The Houston Post.

Think not to say within ourselves, brethren, that unemployment can be cured by idle land and idle factory and a policy of scarcity and a heavy expenditure of public money.

Think not to say within ourselves, brethren, that putting up prices for this or that article will bring prosperity, for price is to prosperity what the mercury bulb is to the thermometer; it registers but doesn't create.

Get the people out of the crowded centers onto the land as home owners; let them be self-reliant and self-sustaining; open to them the markets of the world, and old Unemployment will fold his tent, as does the Arab, and silently steal away.

QUIHI NOTES

And they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver. Gen. 37:28.

With dramatic swiftness, lest Reuben or someone else, or their conscience should revolt, those worthy brethren struck a bargain with those slave-traders, and sold the trembling lad for the current value of slaves at that time, for twenty pieces of silver. The exact value is hard to compute. The pieces were in ring form, stamped with the image, and the respective value, of a lamb or ox, more often the weight of the "pieces" would decide their value, and the Canaanites usually carried a small scale in their belt for their monetary transactions. Whether there was any haggling and bickering in the usual oriental fashion, where the gesticulations of hands and fingers speak as lively as the raucous and bombastic words of quivering lips, we do not know. The urgency of the deal was in favor of the merchants. Age and health and strength and looks of the young man gave every promise of a fast and profitable turnover in Egypt, with numerous "fences" and legalized slave-markets, as well as choice private customers (and their advance orders for tidbits in human flesh), ready to pay the highest price for such a specimen.

What a parting! Can you guess the thoughts of Joseph at this heartless moment, about his brethren, callous to his tears and pleas; about his father whose life would be jeopardized by this act; about his future in a strange land and the well known terrors of slavery? His young faith now encounters a disastrous jolt. Many have it shipwrecked by smaller calamities. Later events show that neither faith nor heart was broken. "In every union (including home-life) there is a mystery, a certain invisible bond which must not be disturbed." Here it was severed in the most cruel way. In a way it's true, "Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage," true to some extent, "Brightest in dungeon, liberty, thou art!" And it's no exaggeration, "Our fathers, chained in prisons dark, were still in heart and conscience free," and, likewise, Jacob's favorite son can hold his convictions, his virtues, his love for home and God sacred and true in the turmoil of temptations, injustice, tortures and disgrace that come with slavery. Yet the burden is little eased thereby and the humiliation cuts to the marrow of the bones, the agony of the soul is apt to shrink and shrivel the physique of even a sturdy youngster into an untimely grave. "For what avail, the plow and sail, or land or life, if freedom fail!"

How often were such and similar repulsive scenes enacted and re-enacted since that day! Not a single nation or commonwealth in the era B. C. was without slavery. The greatest powers had the greatest number of slaves, for work, public and private, for pleasure and as a sign of social distinction. The traffic in slaves was one of the main commercial issues. Even when Christianity and the spirit of brotherly love showed the fundamental injustice of this institution, it took centuries before the reaction set in. Nations with many foreign colonies found their main resources for national wealth and prosperity in this traffic. It was William Wilberforce and his energetic labors that induced the English parliament in 1807 to pass the Abolition Act of Slavery, stopping the nefarious trade. For over 200 years, since 1618, the trade flourished in this country, north and south, and not only humanitarian and Christian but also political and economic motives—the fear of a too rich and powerful south through cheap and profitable slave-labor—brought the final crisis and the Emancipation Act in 1863. The Arabs still indulge in it. And the White Slave trade is by no means expunged, as little as the peonage system in many sections, let alone the subjugation attempts in the Asiatic East. How often it applied, "Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee!" How often that Joseph sale was repeated with all the shame and woe! How often is the heart enslaved by sin and greed and vice, despite an abundance of civic freedom!—Joseph is gone. Is the brethren's heart now at rest, their conscience in sweet peace? Sin never pays, neither here nor there.

A brief but pleasant visit was recently enjoyed when the Rev. M. Heinrich from San Antonio showed up on these premises.

Our soldier boys are over in Louisiana at present. Occasionally they meet, as did Lester Saathoff and Ben Hy. Wiemers the other day. A double pleasure so far from home, and then that home looms up far beyond its ordinary proportions and interests!

Mr. Milton Balzen is up north and taking in various sights. We lack details and await an interesting account before long.

The instruction period, during the summer months, is coming to a close. The confirmation will take place on September 14 at 9 A. M. The following young people will be confirmed after their public examination and confession: The Misses Shirley J. Boehle, Clarice E. M. Eckhart, Mary Lee Eckhart, Ethel Marie Lindeburg and Vernell A. Wiemers; and the young men: Helmer B. Boehle, Merlin F. Boehle, Wilfred B. Boehle, Harold F. Hartmann, Wilkes O. Martin and Ferdinand F. Mumme, Jr. Remember them in your prayers!

What some people call "good luck" in growing trees, shrubs, and flowers is instead good management, in the opinion of Sadie Hatfield, specialist in landscape gardening for the A. and M. College Extension Service. During the dry, warm summer months, a period when plants especially need intelligent care, they often suffer from more mismanagement of moisture than from any other one thing. Shrubs and trees set out this year or last need an ample supply of moisture until they can establish a good root system. Even the native and hardy introduced plants require about two years in getting well established to withstand dry weather unaided. Miss Hatfield quotes R. E. Dickson, superintendent of the Spur Experiment Station, as saying: "An intelligent use of God-given rain will mean more to the beautification of Texas than all other factors combined." In places where there are scant rainfall, Miss Hatfield recommends depressions, contours, and small dams for diverting water to trees, shrubs, and flowers. These same devices will help hold the water for a few days after each rain. Once moisture has soaked into the soil, mulches may be used to keep it there. Well-rotted leaves, rotted straw and hay, and rotted barnyard fertilizer may be put on in layers of one or two inches. All of these materials when worked into the beds next year will help hold water in the soil as well as when used on top as a mulch. The specialist warns against deep cultivation as it may destroy roots. However, shallow cultivation is good for keeping a loose top on the soil and prevents evaporation from below.

More proof of the Texas Game Department's contention that hunting is big business is disclosed in a report of a Game Manager to the executive secretary. The game manager and his assistants checked 1,500 white-wing dove hunters in the Rio Grande Valley and found that they spent a total of $24,600 to bag 25,500 birds. That is an average of 16½ birds per hunter. When it is considered that thousands of persons hunt whitewings each season it can readily be seen that there is a huge turnover in cash just for whitewing hunting. A survey of 102 retail and wholesale dealers in ammunition in twenty towns of Hidalgo, Cameron and Willacy counties showed a gross sale of ammunition for the 1940 white-wing season exceeding $45,614. There was a net profit of approximately $7,754.38 in the sales for the dealers.

*** VALENTINE NESTER LAID TO REST ***

Valentine Nester, lifelong resident of D'Hanis, died in his 93rd year at his home at 2 A. M. Tuesday, August 19, 1941.

Mr. Nester was the last surviving child of the pioneer family of Martin Nester, one of the original settlers of this community. He had the distinction of being the first white child born at D'Hanis, and therefore, the events of his life have been closely linked with the progress of the town ever since the day of his birth, which occurred on St. Valentine's Day, 1841. At an early age he joined the Texas Ranger Service where he served for two years under Captain Richarz. He was married in 1873 to Miss Regina Batot. He engaged in ranching, which he continued until the loss of his eyesight seventeen years ago. Although his physical strength gradually failed, he was mentally alert until the end of his life, enduring with patience the handicaps of advanced age. He was preceded in death by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Agnes Dubray.

On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock Rosary was recited in the Nester home. On Thursday morning, August 21, funeral services were held at 9 o'clock by Reverend Eugene Zuber, pastor of Holy Cross Catholic Church, who read a High Mass of Requiem. Burial took place in the Catholic Cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of friends, neighbors, and kinsmen, all of whom will respect the memory of this venerable old citizen.

Palbearers were grandsons of the deceased, as follows: Lester and Sammy Zerr, Francis Carle, Raymond, Dan, and Walter Nester.

Survivors are three daughters: Mrs. Will Crow of Houston, Mrs. Ben Zerr and Mrs. Reily Carle of D'Hanis; six sons: Robert of Enid, Okla.; Hugo J. of Stillwater, Okla.; Alfred and Martin of D'Hanis; Will J. and E. M. of Hondo; 35 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

INFORMATION FOR SELECTEES

Any Selective Service registrant who was deferred from military training and subsequently reclassified by his local board has the same right to appeal as when he was classified originally. General J. Watt Page, State Selective Service Director, announced today.

Stressing particularly its application to cases of registrants whose periods of deferment for occupational reasons expire, General Page cited a recent memorandum from National Headquarters clarifying Selective Service Regulations affecting the appeal rights of registrants, which reads:

"No classification of a registrant is permanent and any time prior to induction the case of a registrant may be reopened and his classification considered anew. When the case of a registrant is reopened and his classification considered anew, the determination of the local board upon such consideration shall have the effect of a new and original classification even though the registrant is again placed in the class that he was in before the case was reopened. Under these provisions there is no distinction in purpose and effect between the consideration of the original classification of a registrant and the subsequent reopening and consideration of his classification."

While the National Headquarters memorandum was issued primarily to correct a misinterpretation by some local boards of the phrase "at the time the registrant is classified" as used in the Regulations in connection with claims for deferment because of dependents, General Page emphasized that it also applies to all cases involving reclassification.

"Local Boards should bear in mind," he said, "that when classifications of registrants who were deferred because they were contributing in their civilian occupations to the national health, safety and interest—in industrial, agricultural, or

BURRELL-RIEBER WEDDING

A beautiful church wedding took place at 8:30 Tuesday morning, August 26, 1941, in Holy Cross Catholic Church, when Miss Gladys Christina Rieber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rieber of D'Hanis, became the bride of Mr. Walter Joseph Burrell of San Antonio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Burrell of Biry. Reverend Eugene Zuber, pastor, officiated at the ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial High Mass.

The main aisle of the church was flanked with huge ferns, and in the sanctuary were floor baskets with queen's wreath and fern, while vases of white flowers adorned the altar.

The wedding party entered as follows to the strains of the bridal music played on the pipe organ: bridesmaids, Miss Mayme Del Rieber, cousin of the bride, in yellow, and Mrs. Clara Nester, in orchid; the maid of honor, Miss Edna Tschirhart, cousin of the bridegroom, in pink; the matron of honor, Mrs. Louis Lutz, sister of the bride, in blue. They wore similar dresses of taffeta, the bodices adorned with covered buttons down the back, the skirts long and circular, and the sashes of velvet ribbon. Their halo hats and satin sandals were of matching colors. They carried colonial bouquets of gladioli and asters, of mixed colors, tied with green maline bows.

The flower girls, little Misses Margaret Mueller and Marian Knippa, wore long taffeta frocks and matching poke bonnets, the former blue, the latter white. They carried colonial bouquets.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta fashioned with long sleeves puffed at the shoulder and pointed at the wrist. The long bodice had self-covered buttons in back and a sweetheart neckline adorned with a pearl-studded clip. The full gathered skirt extended to form a train. Her short tulle veil was shirred and caught with orange blossoms to form a halo. Her sandals were of white satin and her colonial bouquet was of white carnations and gladioli. At her throat she wore a gold cross on a chain.

The groomsmen were Stanley and Staley Jaeger of Castroville, cousins of the bridegroom.

The bride was met at the sanctuary by the bridegroom, who was attended by her cousin, William Enderle of San Antonio, serving as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The cake was a rectangular confection iced in white and embossed with pink roses and silver leaves. At noon luncheon was served to more than a hundred guests, many of whom were relatives from out of town. Miss Edna Ilse was in charge of the bride's book.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Burrell left for a brief honeymoon trip to Corpus Christi. For traveling, the bride wore a victory blue crepe frock with a jeweled pin at the shoulder. Her hat and gloves were sherry brown, and her shoes and bag were black.

The young couple will make their home in San Antonio. Mr. Burrell being employed in civil service, with a position in the Base Hospital at Fort Sam Houston.

professional activities—are reconsidered, they must again be given notice of classification and accorded the same right of appeal before induction as when they were classified originally.

While any registrant who is reclassified may appeal within 10 days after his notice of classification is mailed, General Page said, those who have occupational deferments or their employers, are urged to anticipate their desire for extension of deferment, and so inform the local board well in advance.

"This will not only facilitate action in such cases," he said, "but will also help to prevent interference with the National Defense program."

Castroville's annual celebration in honor of its patron, Saint Louis, was held Sunday, August 24th. Long time attendants at these year events say this occasion set a record for large attendance, descendants of the pioneer families who settled there in the middle and late 1840s having gathered from far and near.

At noon a bounteous barbecue dinner was served, and the afternoon was given over to various and sundry amusements, but the chief pleasure consisted of the renewal of old acquaintances and the making of new friendships. A grand dance at night closed the event.

ZION'S LUTHERAN CHURCH

9:30 A. M. divine service in the German language.

Sunday school teachers meeting Monday night, Sept. 1st, at 8:30 P. M. I wish all pupils and students and teachers that are going to attend and teach school God's blessing and benediction.

Friends, why not invite your kind friends and neighbors to please attend church with you this Sunday? It would be a good habit to start and this bit of service everybody can render for the Master. Try it, please. Please do not fail to come yourself. We cordially invite you to worship with us this Sunday.

Pastor.

There is no point in letting old grasses and weeds continue to take fertility and moisture out of the soil, according to R. R. Lancaster, Extension pasture specialist for Texas A. and M. College. Therefore, now pastures discriminately. Mowing is another practical benefit. What there is too much grass for a few months, part of it may be mowed for hay and fed profitably when pastures are short. Tall, coarse grass in humid regions is a bad kind of weed, but a good turf of thrifty, well-grazed pasture supporting a few broom weeds and dove weeds may not need too much mowing. When tall and coarse grass dies it won't let even its own kind grow. Mowing land that produces only needle grass and "Poa Joe" is not worth the expense. If Bermuda, carpet and kindred grasses get too far ahead of stock cut them to new growth can start. Otherwise these grasses get tough and do stock no good when grazed. Many pastures which need mowing cannot be cut because of worthless brush and trees. These should not be confused with occasional groups of trees that form beauty spots or maturing timber, or protected patches of brush that provide feed and protection to song birds and game. Such growth may have greater value than grasslands, and a few such places in pastures are worth saving and even fencing. Grass along fences and in ditches furnishes protection and feed for wildlife. There is no set rule for the number of cuttings in pastures, but when three are planned the first should be made in late May or early June, and for two mowings June would be the most suitable for the first.

Deer, buffalo and Guernsey cattle graze side by side and drink out of the same water tank on the Reynolds Brothers' ranch near Fort Davis (Jeff Davis County). The Guernsey cattle were secured years ago, dead are plentiful in the area and about 27 buffalo roam about the ranch. Authorities say this is one of the few places in the world where wild and tame animals graze side by side.

Time wasted is existence—used is life.—Young.
